CONCEPT

Pakta means union in Quechua language originally from Peru: union of two cultures, union of two cuisines. The design of the space parts from this idea, understanding that the base of this Nikkei cuisine is the Japanese side but surrounded with the flavors, colors and traditions of Peru.

This new proposal want's to bring together the city of Barcelona to a relatively new style of cooking but not less interesting for this reason that is the Nikkei.

The word Nikkei when we talk about gastronomy, we refer to all Japanese cooking that is done out of Japan, using in the preparation local products or techniques, but for the majority the word has been defined as a mixture between Peruvian and Japanese cuisines. Were both products and techniques mix together perfectly

SPACE

The restaurant base elements like the bars, the kitchen and furniture are designed with a clear reference to the austerity of traditional Japanese taverns architecture. An explosion of Peruvian colors surround the space like a second skin, skin that is materialized through direct reference of the Peruvian looms.

In the entrance, the sake and pisco bar acts as a filter between the outside and the inside and is built through a three-dimensional lattice of wooden crosses to enter the client, prior to the dining area.

Presiding the dining area, we find the sushi bar where diners can sit and interact with chefs in charge of sushi and other cold dishes of the menu.

CAPACITY OF THE SPACE

Rounding out the main space, we find the dining room:

- 7 tables, which together with the sushi bar, are the perfect setting to enjoy a quiet but cheerful atmosphere.
- Closing the dining space at the end is the kitchen, which is conceived as a light box that suggests the activity of the cooks that are inside.

Depending on the service we would like to provide the client we have different capacities, in any case the price for exclusivity will be the same:

* Traditional sit down service:

Maximum 32 people

* Cocktail style service:

Maximum capacity 45 people

- Informal type of service in which food and beverages are constantly being served.
 - The client can roam around the venue enjoying of the ambiance and the food.
 - We personally recommend this type of even.

GASTRONOMIC OFFER

Perú-Nikkei-Japón

The merger between these two styles was born the adaptation of Japanese cuisine with Peruvian products and the similitude of characteristics that they share in presentation, color, mixture and variety of ingredients .

The rich nature of Peru were there are 85 different climates gives a huge number of products.

At Pakta you can enjoy ceviches, nigiris, causas, sashimis, etc.... All of Peru's and Japan's cultures united to Mediterranean ingredients and the Adrià brothers knowhow
